Here are some of the top candidates who provided the best answers in the question-and-answer round and ended up only in first place. Sometimes, a great answer just isn't enough. Paula Andrea Betancourt of Medellin, Colombia, was the most visible candidate miss universe in 1993. Paula answered all her questions in Spanish in a very quick, reliable, confident, and smiley way. Competed in Mexico City, Mexico, Dayanara Torres of Puerto Rico won the crown. Question: If you're going to be Miss Universe, what's the most important thing you want to achieve? Answer: Since I came from the Amazon land in [Colombia], we are like my lungs in the world. What I would like to do is to add my voice to all the countries of the world in an environmental campaign, so that we can conserve our natural resources. So that we can present it to our children, who are the future of the world. So they can live in a healthy and loving environment. This was the year when India was seeking its first ever one-way win in Windhoek, Namibia. The outgoing Queen, Sushmita Sen, Miss Universe 1994, provided one of the best answers in the history of the contest the previous year. If there was one candidate who could outperform her, it was Manpreet Bra from Delhi, India. Her well-felt voice and very quiet nature added to the way she gave her answers. Top 6 Interview - Judges Questionst: If you find yourself discriminating against you because of race, what will you do? Answer: There is a saying: If your back is bent, then only someone will climb on it. So stand upright and no one will ever get on your back, that's all. Question: If you had the ability to do anything you wanted to improve the status of women in your country, what would you do? A: I would like to give women in my ability and the right to choose. The right to choose their lives, the right to choose what they want to do with their lives. Only then will individuals, not only mothers, daughters or wives, but individuals... Thinking, living individuals. The Philippines came close to capturing its third crown during Miss Universe 2012. Janine Tugonon continued to finish fifth for the third year in a row. The question was sent on Twitter, and Judge Nigel Parker asked him: As an international ambassador, do you think speaking English should be a prerequisite for being Miss Universe? Why or why not? Answer: For me, being Miss Universe is not just about knowing how to speak a specific language. It's the ability to influence and inspire others. So what.... (Applause audience) so whatever language you have, as long as your heart is to serve and you have a strong mind to show people, then you can be Miss Universe. Thank you. At this stage, many observers of the competition thought they would win. But it was Miss USA, Oilivia Culpo, who eventually triumphed, to become the eighth Miss USA to win the coveted title. Ironically, janine's former miss Venezuela, Irene Esser, spoiled her question and final answer as she struggled to answer in English. Whenever a candidate loses a better answer, many fans were quick to post on social media that the contest was rigged, that referees from the same country, or that the organization preferred the winning country because they would host or host the contest. In The general impression of judges about candidates, the personalities of the judges and the backgrounds that make the difference. Typically, the great contest answers may be overly sound, giving the impression that the candidate lacks originality, in contrast to a more explicit and casual answer that may depict a more honest and approaching person. Ultimately, it really boils down to who judges like the best and feel can fulfill the role of Miss Universe. – Rappler.comVoltaire has 10 years of experience in the fashion industry.
